The Bank of France has 1,053,000,000 francs in silver. In dollars $210,600,000.

An experienced office-seeker says that "the surest political appointment is—disappointment."

St. Louis is trying to secure the Government exhibit at New Orleans for her Exposition next fall.

It has been observed that when a man becomes a professional laboring man he usually stops work altogether.

An old landmark has just been demolished in Boston. The Hollis Street Church, dedicated in 1732, has been torn down to make way for a new theater.

It is said that the soldiers in the Salvation Army are required to sign an obligation not to court the halcyon lass for twelve months after their enlistment.

A French physician announces the discovery that growing and crying afford relief when in pain. The bald-headed babies long ago expressed their belief in this theory.

Is the colonies of the administration toward the office-seekers complied with this weather does not suffice in frigidities perhaps they might take a small iceberg into their trousers.

The warlike tenor of foreign advices has had tendency to stiffen prices of grain and meats. Chicago packing houses have received orders for immense quantities of canned meats.

It is well said that you will nearly always find that the socialist who desires to wash his hands in the blood of the monopolist doesn't usually desire to wash his hands in soap and water.

VICTOR HUGO is a spiritualist. He believes that he has existed through all time. He is convinced of an eternal existence because his soul is full of hymns, dramas and poems which he has not yet written.

The breath of spring has recently reached Pittsburgh. The editor of the Chronicle lightly murmurs, "Love is a mass of intangible emotions over which predominates an insane desire to squeeze somebody."

ASTORIA Legislature, like man, is a wonderfully and fearfully made up affair, but fortunately for the body politic it has its day. The event of its dissolution is one of the few funerals at which the mourners are scarce and their grief but barely perceptible.

TERRIBLE sufferings are reported from the famine-stricken districts of West Virginia. Entire families are subsisting on parched corn; the pasturage is burned and the live stock is dying off. Can not something be done for our suffering countrymen and women? Who will be the first in the good work?

The scandalous state of things by which the bank robbers of the United States have found a welcome asylum in Canada will soon end. Embarrassed and criminal bankrupts will be included in the eighteen classes of crime to be covered in the new extradition treaty. Cashiers should make the most of their time.

It really begins to look as if Cleveland were actually in earnest about civil service reform. He moves along serenely unconscious of the appeals of office-seekers, and does pretty much as he pleases about appointments. If he keeps this up he will make a reputation as a President who means what he says in his letter of acceptance.

The rumor of a probable war between England and Russia has stimulated the demand from England for oats from the Atlantic instead of the Baltic ports. The shipments for March from New York alone promise to reach 600,000 bushels, which will exceed the shipments for any one month heretofore.

The engagements on the range from 25,000 to 30,000 bushels a day, and on Tuesday they footed up about 50,000 bushels. There are also large shipments of Canadian oats in transit by the Glasgow steamers. Most of the demand comes from London. A fair export demand also comes from Bordeaux.

Tax stacks of pig iron on hand and unsold at the close of 1884 amounted to 391,000 net tons, against 533,800 tons at the close of 1883, 429,694 tons at the close of 1882, 219,896 tons at the close of 1881, and 456,638 tons at the close of 1880. The production of pig iron in 1884 was 4,885,000 net tons, against 5,146,974 tons in 1883, 5,178,122 tons in 1882, 4,641,964 tons in 1881, and 4,295,114 tons in 1880. The production in 1884 was 290,000 tons more than in the boom year 1880 and nearly as much as in 1881. The number of furnaces in blast at the close of 1884 was 233, against 367 at the close of 1883, and 417 at the close of 1882.

PNEUMONIA AND THE RINKS.

New York is alarmed at the prevalence of pneumonia. In February this disease carried off 575 victims, and in January 380. Last week its victims numbered 149. Dr. John T. Nagle, registrar of vital statistics in the Health Department of New York, was asked whether roller skating was responsible for the recent great increase in the number of deaths from pneumonia. He said those who have visited the skating rinks have observed how careless the young people are of the weather. They dash about for hours in the heated rooms, and when the time comes to go home they find the cool air rather refreshing than otherwise. They find the cars crowded, perhaps, and walk through the chilly streets while yet perspiring from their violent exercise. All this tends to pneumonia. A little roller skating or dancing might be healthful, but it should be under proper precautionary conditions. The exercise should not be too protracted or violent. The dress should be appropriate, and the changes of dress should conform to the change of temperature. A young lady who should go out into the open air with her ball dress after vigorous dancing, would be considered very indiscreet. Yet the change is quite as marked when young girls skate for hours in street costumes, and then go out overhated without change.

Another eminent physician said: "Roller skaters are so absorbed in pleasure that they forget all about their health. Many contract colds in that way that carry them to the grave. The craze has without doubt increased the number of victims of pneumonia. Not a few aggravated cases that have come under my observation are traceable to indiscretion of this sort."

A third physician said: "Each rink ought to have a drying room for women and children at least. Women go racing around a hall for hours, until they can go no longer. They are all in a perspiration, but without waiting until they are cooled off, they go out into the chilly air and catch cold. There ought to be large, comfortable dressing-rooms, well heated, where they could rest without being cooled too suddenly in the open air or cars."

AN AMERICAN PUMP FOR EGYPT.

The English War Office recently purchased an American pump, or rather a special pumping engine, among its army supplies for use in the Sudan. Englishmen have quite as much pride in their productions as Americans have in ours, and of course there was a general expression of dissent at the action indicated in the foregoing. A London firm, in a recent letter to an English paper, gives an idea of the feeling in regard to the matter. This firm says: "The public is painfully aware that at the present time many thousands of our artisans are in a state of enforced idleness and their families starving. Iron works, collieries, engineering and other similar industrial establishments throughout the country are, for the most part, only partially employed, and in too many instances are entirely stopped, while employers of labor find themselves subject to diminished incomes, and with the burden of increased and an increasing taxation to bear. In the face of all this, and considering the notable fact that our ports are open to the free importation of machinery from the United States, while English machinery exported to that country is subject there to a heavy prohibitive duty, we would venture to ask, is it fair to English machinists, much less, is it a patriotic act for the English Government to give an order to a foreign country for machinery required for the use of the British Army?"

There is one significant point about this letter of interest to us, and that is that there are so many people in England out of employment—some to the extent of their families starving for the want of it. A war between England and Russia, although a sad remedy, would change all this, and we do not advocate it, but simply call attention to it in passing.

In regard to the pumping engine, however, that was purchased in this country, we understand that a member of the firm who has the contract to put down the pipeline is an American engineer, who has had unusual experience in constructing oil-pipe lines, and as time was the element in this work, he very properly expressed a preference for pumps made by a firm to whom this branch of manufacture is no novelty; at any rate, he wanted pumps that he knew all about, as this was no time to chance delays or make experiments. This pipeline and the pumping engines required were probably wanted in a great hurry, and the American firm were prepared to furnish them promptly, and hence the order was placed on this side of the water.

And the point also is made that however much business may be languishing in England, English manufacturers should bear in mind that their soldiers are also suffering in a horrible climate, and that the relief of an army is the point at issue. The policy of free trade or protection for home production should not be a consideration in the solution of this problem. It is a question of humanity, and suffering at that, and the quicker relieved the better.

A HEAVY BLOW AT POLYGAMY.

The recent Supreme Court decision on the Mormon question, it strikes us, is pretty sound law and is the worst blow yet struck against Mormonism.

Give a people the franchise and no laws are effective, nor can be made effective, against them. Allow polygamists to continue to vote in Utah, and as a matter of course, polygamy will continue to prevail.

In this case the Mormons insisted that the commissioners had no right to prevent registration of Mormon voters on the ground of polygamist practices. Mr. Justice Matthews takes the position that, while Congress can not interfere with the personal rights of the people of the Territory, their political rights are another thing and subject, so long as Utah is a territory, to grants at will by Congress, under whose absolute jurisdiction they are. Therefore Congress can limit the right of suffrage and condition its exercise as it sees fit. Therefore polygamists and bigamists can be denied the right of registration or voting at the will of Congress. But Congress has declared through this commission that the bigamists, etc., shall not register as voters. Consequently the enactment of the territorial laws is given over into the keeping of the monogamists, and the twin rule of porters must take a back seat. As before stated this decision is about the heaviest blow at Mormonism that it has yet received, and its force will be unquestionably felt in Utah. In the matter of religion, polygamy being one of the tenets of the creed and its defense being placed on that ground, we have never, under the Constitution, felt so absolutely certain that the evil could be suppressed.

But when they themselves place their defense on a purely political ground, the extent of the authority of the general government of the Territories, they desert their stronghold and pin their faith to a broken reed. Under such circumstances, but a few years will be required to root out the polygamous practices of the Territory.

The new administration could do no act that would be received with greater favor by the great body of the people than the effectual suppression of polygamy.

We earnestly hope and believe that President Cleveland's administration will do itself the honor to see to it that this blot upon our Christian civilization is effectually sponged out of existence.

THE EUROPEAN WAR CLOUD.

England and Russia, two great powers, seem about to lock horns, and will unless it is a square back down on the part of Great Britain, or Russia gives assurances, clinched by proper action, of her intentions in Asia. For years past Russia has slowly but surely been making advances and getting a foothold in Afghanistan. Such has been her policy, steadily pursued, for a long time, until gradually the armies of the Czar have approached the northern frontier of India. Once the neutral ground of Afghanistan is crossed by Russian troops and the glove will have been laid down for a contest, the end of which can not be foreseen. War will surely involve three continents and be waged with a fury unknown in the Eastern hemisphere since the days of Napoleon Bonaparte, and with a destruction of life fearful to contemplate in this age, when the implements and munitions of war have almost reached perfection in death dealing power.

For twenty years Russia has been engaged in spreading her control over Central Asia, gradually adding one after another of the previously independent provinces, with their princes and sovereigns, to her empire, which has grown in extent of territory until the area is vast indeed. The conquered people have been subjugated in the most complete manner, they having adopted the manners, customs and religion of the Russians. She has built railroads across her vast domains, placed fleets of iron steamers upon the great inland seas, and can now send an army in a week's time from Odessa, a great southern seaport, to the interior of Asia. She has organized the natives into well-disciplined, well-drilled troops, whose loyalty and efficiency have been the better secured by the promise of Russia that they shall share in the rich and abundant spoils which they have been led to believe were to be gained by the conquest of India, while her army of a million men far outnumber any force that England can muster.

Russia's whole policy pursued for years shows a well-matured plan of conquest including India in its ultimate result, which she has intended to accomplish in her own way and in her own time. While Russia has successfully aimed to secure the friendship of her conquered provinces, which she has so rapidly absorbed within her boundaries, England has been losing her hold upon India with its 250,000,000 of inhabitants by a contrary course, so has few friends or strong supporters. Great Britain has given the people of India her strong protection, has established law and order and sought to introduce a higher civilization; but she has never cultivated the people of India, nor of any country who paid tribute to her, in that friendly way—placing them upon an equal footing with her own citizens—that Russia has done. While the latter has made strong allies of her subjugated provinces in Asia, England has almost antagonized the people of India, who will not come to her support willingly nor effectively.

Great Britain, however, has prestige, vast wealth, immense influence at home, and will maintain her power with a determination and courage and stubbornness that will meet any enemy without fear and with a power well known to all the world.
